Résumé: Ce document de travail présente les premiers résultats d'un questionnaire mené en mai 2004 (les 8 et 9 mai) auprès de 331 étudiants de l'Université d'Addis Abeba afin de connaître leur opinion sur la démocratie ainsi que les préférences politiques qu'ils expriment à travers leur vote.

Le document prend la forme du questionnaire lui-même où nous avons inséré, pour chaque question, les premiers résultats statistiques obtenus. Une table des matières synthétique ainsi qu'un index en fin de document ont été créés pour faciliter l'accès du lecteur à l'information qu'il recherche.

¹ I particularly thank the Chaire de Développement Durable of Ecole Polytechnique and the Swedish International Development Cooperation Agency for funding this research program. I am also very grateful to Gunnar Köhlin and Peter Martinsson from Gothenburg University for their precious help during my stay in Addis Ababa, and to Gérard Prunier, Director of the French Center for Ethiopian Studies, for the insight he gave me on the Ethiopian history and politics. Finally, I renew all my gratitude to Jean-François Laslier and Karine van der Straeten for their very helpful comments during the design of the questionnaire.

FOREWORD

This working paper contains the first results of a questionnaire that was conducted in May 2004 (May, 8-9) among 331 students of the Addis Ababa University to know their opinion about democracy and their political preferences.

This survey is part of a research program aiming at analysing ethical and altruistic behaviours in the field of public choice.

As regarding our questionnaire, the final objective is to understand how, in a multi-ethnic country on the road to democracy like Ethiopia, individuals trade off between private and public interest when they decide about redistribution issues when voting. Such concern obviously encompasses the choice of tax level about which poor people and rich people disagree, but also the mechanism through which the tax-financed public good is then redistributed among citizens. Indeed, the sharing rules of public good constitute a potential bone of contention between people coming from different ethnic groups when ethnic-oriented political parties compete during elections, as well as between people supporting the incumbent and people supporting opposition, when the incumbent party develops vote-catching platforms.

In the case of Ethiopia, this trade-off may be particularly vivid since allegedly non-discriminating political parties compete with parties whose vote-catching or ethnic-oriented ambitions are well-known.

This working paper takes the form of the questionnaire itself in which we included, for each question, the corresponding first statistical results that we get. We create a synthetic table of content as well as an index at the end of the document to facilitate for the reader an easy access to the information he may be looking for.

“Democracy and voting” survey

General instructions

I. Object of the survey

This survey aims at understanding the way people perceive democracy and their right to vote. The questions mainly intend to understand how deeply anchored democratic principles are in people’s mind and not at all to describe in details how democracy works in Ethiopia.

In addition to democracy and voting, the questionnaire also provides questions about how people trust each other, and how people think that health care should be allocated between patients, when there are more individuals who need treatment than there are resources to provide such treatments.

The questionnaire is divided in 5 sections. The first one is dedicated to the collection of very general information about the respondent (his gender, his age...etc) so as to help us classify the data. The second section assesses how people perceive democracy in their country. The third section focuses on how people perceive their right to vote and use this right. Finally, the fourth section deals with trust issues and the fifth section with *health care priority*¹.

II. Research program

Ethiopia has been chosen as a pilot country to conduct an academic survey on democratic institutions and behaviours. If the submission of the questionnaire in Ethiopia turns out to give conclusive results, we will submit it in other African countries experiencing democracy, but also in countries where the democratization process started much earlier (like Western European countries, and Northern American countries). Your collaboration through answering the questions is thus of highest importance for the success of our research program within the Department of Economics of Ecole Polytechnique in France and of Gothenburg University in Sweden.

III. Recommendations

You have 2 hours to answer all the questions. However, you will be given additional time in case this delay is not sufficient for you.

We are at your entire disposal whenever you encounter difficulty alongside the questionnaire. Please call us for help discretely, so as not to disturb other respondents.

In this survey we ask you to answer a number of questions on a total anonymous basis. None of the answers that you will give will enable us to identify you once we will analyse them. Regarding the list of the students who have been selected for the questionnaire, we engage to keep it totally confidential. So, feel confident and answer the most honestly as possible.

However, if you consider that some questions are too indiscreet or not understandable, this is of course your right not to answer them by circling the answer “I don’t know or don’t wish to answer” in the questionnaire or leaving a blank.

Remember that this is not a test and there are neither good nor bad answers and neither true nor false ones. Please give your own personal opinion, without consulting the other people answering the questionnaire.

IV. Examples

There is 3 types of questions which are illustrated through the 3 following examples:

¹ The third and fourth sections were designed by Peter Martinsson from Gothenburg University for his own research activities. For that reason, they are not included in the present document.

Ex 1: “Do you like coffee?”

- a. Yes, very much
- b. Yes, to some extent
- c. Rather no
- d. Not at all
- e. I don't know or don't wish to answer

Imagine that you like coffee very much. In that case, you have to circle answer “a”.

Your final answer is thus:

- (a.) Yes, very much

Ex 2: “Do you agree or not with the following sentences?”

	Strongly agree	Rather agree	Rather disagree	Strongly disagree	I don't know/ NA
a. Coffee is tasty.....
b. Ethiopia should also produce tea, in addition to coffee.....

[Please place a cross in the box of your choice for each proposition]

Regarding the first sentence, since we suppose that you like coffee very much, you should strongly agree with this sentence. So, you have to place a cross in the box “Strongly agree” as shown below. Regarding the second sentence, suppose that you think that tea cultivation is not very suited to Ethiopia: you thus have to place a cross in the box “Rather disagree” as shown below.

Your final answer is thus:

	Strongly agree	Rather agree	Rather disagree	Strongly disagree	I don't know/ NA
a. Coffee is tasty.....	X
b. Ethiopia should also produce tea, in addition to coffee.....			X

[Please place a cross in the box of your choice for each proposition]

Ex 3: “Please read the 2 following sentences:

Statement A: “Between tea and coffee, coffee is the most tasty”

Statement B: “Between tea and coffee, tea is the most tasty”

Could you please indicate in the following chart which of these 2 statement (A or B) you most agree with?

Only agree with A and not at all with B	Much more agree with A than with B	More agree with A than with B	Agree as much with A as with B	More agree with B than with A	Much more agree with B than with A	Only agree with B and not at all with A

[Please place a cross in the box of your choice or leave a blank if you don't know or don't wish to answer]

Suppose that you consider that tea is as tasty as coffee. In such conditions, you have to place a cross right in the middle of the scale.

Your final answer is thus:

Only agree with A and not at all with B	Much more agree with A than with B	More agree with A than with B	Agree as much with A as with B	More agree with B than with A	Much more agree with B than with A	Only agree with B and not at all with A

[Please place a cross in the box of your choice or leave a blank if you don't know or don't wish to answer]

⁴ “Lower income”: people having less than 150 Birrs. “Lower middle income”: people having between 150 and 600 Birrs. “Middle income”: people having between 601 and 1200 Birrs. “Upper middle income”: people having between 1201 and 3000 Birrs. “Upper income”: people having more than 3000 Birrs.

According to World Bank, Ethiopia’s GNI per capita over year 2003 was equal to 90 USD, which is equivalent to 790,96 Birrs when using the average exchange rate during the same period (1 USD=8.78841 ETB). This amounts to a monthly average income of 65.91 Birrs per capita.

According to Bigsten and Negatu (“The Anatomy of Income Distribution in Urban Ethiopia”, 1999, African Development Review, vol.11, n°1), the breakdown of the 1108 urban Ethiopia households interviewed during the 1994 urban socioeconomic survey in 7 cities (among which 662 Addis Ababa households) is as follows (we compare it with the results of our sample):

	Bigsten/Negatu		Our sample
	All	Addis Ababa
10-299	44.5	45.5	40.4
300-599	25.4	23.9	21.3

Students' concluding remarks

Some students (specially Oromo students) came to the interviewer after the questionnaire to complain about what they called an “over-representation” of Tigreans among the respondents. Two of them expressed their disappointment through comments written at the end of their questionnaire:

- “I am very disappointed by this survey because the questionnaire is filled in by 99% of one ethnic group (i.e: from the ruling party). So I think that it is not fairly filled. Oromo and other ethnic groups (except Tigreans) are not represented at all.”
- “It would be good if this questionnaire is filled by all ethnic groups living in Ethiopia but I feel unhappy because in the class there is only one ethnic group represented. There is a bias by the coordinator²⁷ you are working with.”

We emphasized at question QA28 that Oromo and SNNP students are indeed under-represented in our sample compared to other ethnic groups. Oromos however count for 20.8% of the respondents, which should enable us to get the necessary information to understand the underlying incentives of their political opinion. We'll have to be more cautious when analysing answers of SNNP students since they stand for only 11.6% of the sample.

The ethnic political hegemony that Tigreans are supposed to have established through the adoption of a federalist system was often highlighted by students, either explicitly through notes on the margin, or through their answers. In that sense, 61.9% of the respondents claimed to support regional federalism, while only 14.2% wrote to be in favour of ethnic federalism (see QA27). Here is the comment of one student that we find quite illustrative of that commonly shared feeling: “The political system in Ethiopia is not ready for free elections. All political parties should participate. Federal system in Ethiopia is not acceptable because it only favours one ethnic group: the Tigrayans. Recommendations: Ethiopia should continue the federal system in such a way that all Ethiopians are respected and seen as one in front of law (equal). It must represent the interest of the whole nation.”

²⁷ We hired some students to help us recruit potential respondents. Some of them were accused by their fellow students of having favoured the recruitment of people from their own ethnic groups which appears to be only partly true.

Finally, the questionnaire was conducted in a very tense context. Indeed, on April, 29, 2004 (one week before the implementation of the survey) a grenade was thrown in a television room at Addis Ababa University during a Tigrayan language news program, killing one student and injuring eight others. Some suspects were arrested by the police which rapidly charged OLF (the Oromo Liberation Front fighting for the independence of the Oromo people) for being responsible of this bomb attack (which has not been proved yet), as a response to the expulsion of 330 Oromo students from the Addis Ababa University in January²⁸. Many students were shocked by this event and some of them expressed their resentment at the end of the questionnaire:

- “I am strongly opposed to OLF because I consider it as a terrorist organisation, and not at all as a political party. Do you remember what they did last week on the campus of Siddist Kilo²⁹?”
- “Marie-Anne Valfort, please say once back in France the horrible actions that OLF is leading in the country. Thank you.”

These recent terrorist actions may explain that, while university campus are often considered as places of political rebellion, a massive proportion of students (71.3%) declared no to be interested in using force or violent methods to express their dissatisfaction with politics (see QB19).

²⁸ They were blamed for having participated on January, 4, 2004 in a demonstration protesting against the Federal Government's order that the offices of the Oromiya Regional State administration be transferred from Addis Ababa to Adama (also known as Nazareth), a town 100 kilometres east of Addis Ababa.

²⁹ Siddist Kilo is the district where the Addis Ababa University is located.
